

ID-Card

Who need ID-cards?

All undertakings that perform work at building- and construction sites, both Norwegian and foreign, are required to provide their employees with ID-cards. The purpose of this is to identify both who You are and who You work for.

Foreign workers employed by foreign companies at assignments at building and construction sites in Norway must also carry ID-cards. This also applies to short-term assignments.

One-man enterprises (including those that operate on their own) shall have ID-cards. Undertakings (skilled tradesmen) that only provide services in the consumer market are also obliged to provide their employees (and/or themselves) with ID-cards. When engaging skilled tradesmen in connection with building of or improvements to houses or holiday cabins, private individuals should request to see ID-cards.

Personel who perform support functions such as cleaning, catering, etc. are also required to carry ID-cards when they are permanently established on the site. Persons who transport goods to building and construction sites shall be provided with ID-cards if such transport takes place on a regular basis.

If you have an ID-card for an undertaking which employs You from time to time, but also take on construction assignments for other undertakings or for Your own undertaking, You must have an ID-card for each undertaking. The purpose of this is to identify both who You are and who You work for.
